BONUS TOOLKIT

Pantry Labels & Storage Toolkit

The printable companion to Amish Dry Mix Pantry Cookbook

What is in here

1. 85 ready-to-print jar labels, one for every mix in the book. Each one carries the lines that make a jar usable on a busy night: how much to use, what to add, what it makes and the allergens in the mix, with the page of its card and its recipe. You only write the date.
   - Everyday Seasonings & Savory Bases: 20 labels
   - Soups, Gravies & Meal-Ready Mixes: 25 labels
   - Baking, Breakfast & Drink Mixes: 40 labels
2. 10 blank jar labels for your own mixes and variations.
3. 6 lid labels. For jars you store with the front facing away, or read from above.
4. 6 shelf labels. One for each group of mixes in the book, so the cupboard tells you where things go.
5. Master pantry inventory, already filled in with all 85 mixes and their pages.
6. Rotation log. For keeping the oldest jar in front.
7. Shopping checklist. The dry staples these mixes are built from.

How to print

Print at 100% scale or Actual size, not Fit to page, or the labels will come out slightly small. Black and white is fine: every sheet stays readable without color.

The jar labels are 2 x 4 inches, ten per sheet, on the layout of the most common US label sheets (Avery 5163 and compatibles), so you can print straight onto adhesive labels. Plain paper works too: cut along the outlines and attach with a glue stick. Clear tape over a paper label keeps it legible when the jar gets handled.

Print only the sheets you need: each one carries the name of its chapter at the top.

> Write the date before you fill the jar. It is the one line nobody goes back to add later, and it is the line that tells you how long you have.

Your review makes a real difference.

LID LABELS

For the top of the jar. Name and date only, so you can read the shelf from above.

> A lid label is not a replacement for the jar label. It is what you read when the jars are lined up and you are looking down at them.

SHELF LABELS

One for each group of mixes in the book. Tape to the shelf edge.

Seasonings & Savory Bases

All-purpose blends, rubs, broth powders

Soups & Gravies

Cream bases, gravy starters, skillet bases

Baking & Breakfast

Pancakes, muffins, cookies, quick breads

Drink Mixes

Cocoa, chai, coffee, lemonade

Family Batches

Larger jars, for a crowd or a long week

Use Me First

The front row. Oldest jars live here

Master Pantry Inventory

Tape this inside the cupboard door. Update it twice only: when you make a mix, and when a jar runs low. That is enough to know on a Tuesday what you can cook without opening a single lid.

Rotation Log

When you make a second jar of something, the old one goes in front. Write the new one here, and you will never find a fourteen-month-old gravy base behind the cocoa.

MIX	MADE	OPENED	FINISHED / DISCARDED

Before you use any mix: it should smell like what it is, pour loosely, and look even. If it has turned solid, moisture got in. Start over.

Dry Staples Checklist

The shelf these mixes are built from. Tick what you are low on before you shop, not after.

FLOURS, STARCHES & GRAINS	HAVE / NEED
All-purpose flour
Cornstarch
Rolled oats
Cornmeal

LEAVENING & SEASONING	HAVE / NEED
Baking powder: check the date, it is the first to go
Baking soda
Fine salt
Granulated sugar
Garlic powder · onion powder
Dried parsley · basil · oregano · thyme
Black pepper · paprika · chili powder · cumin

BASES & POWDERS	HAVE / NEED
Nonfat dry milk powder
Bouillon or broth powder
Unsweetened cocoa powder

> Buy the smallest baking powder tin that suits how much you bake. It is the ingredient that limits how long every rising mix stays good, and a large tin rarely gets used before it weakens.
